Profile

In the final year of studying International Relations, I decided that I wanted to try something new. I've always been interested in programming, but I used to think it required a lot of complex mathematical knowledge. When I realized that's not true at all, I decided to give it a try and learn front-end development. My favorite part about programming is that you can create something, and it can be whatever you want. I like to follow the latest tools like React, Vite, TypeScript, TailwindCSS and others.
